Ministry of Foreign Affairs

The general framework:

This booklet is a summary of the work of civil society organizations' projects carried out between 2015 and 2018, supported by the Program of Support of Local Government and Stability in Libya, implemented by the International Center for Local Development and Good Governance (CILG), the North African and Middle East Office of the International Cooperation Agency of the Dutch Municipal Association VNG International, with support from the European Union and the Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The program covers 23 municipalities from different Libyan regions and stems from the principle that it is possible to establish change on the local level to improve governance and implement stability and development. The program aims at contributing to the enhancement and empowerment of local government in Libya by focusing on three dimensions: improving the local administration, the quality of services provided to citizens, and expanding the scope of community participation in local affairs, all of which fall within the projects presented in this booklet.

Objectives:

The program's support to community projects aims at improving the capacities of civil society organizations in Libya and their performance, through trainings in planning and implementing projects in partnership with municipalities. Local communities are a key pillar in the process of decision making and the establishment of a participatory and rational local governance. The program's support therefore looks to enhance the desired partnership between local official government structures and civil societies at local levels, which then allows the participation of local organizations in the conception of municipal policies and projects to be more effective and efficient.

Moreover, supporting the community projects aims at activating the role of civil society in the implementation of projects within the local development plan in various economic, social, cultural and environmental fields. It also supports civil society's ability to accompany, follow up and evaluate, on the one hand, and activate its oversight role in accountability, seeking information, and establishing stability on the other.

The program also aims to ensure communication between the citizens and the municipality, since change is a collective process in which the efforts of the various local actors converge.

In view of the importance of decentralized border cooperation between the Libyan and Tunisian municipalities and its positive effects on the level of exchange and inter-cooperation in various fields, Tunisian associations active in the Tunisian municipal border areas have been allowed to participate in this program in order to develop participatory activities between municipalities and border civil societies, with the purpose of valuating and sharing experiences and skills, promoting joint action.

The process of selection and completion of associative projects

A process, starting with improving the capabilities of civil society organizations wishing to submit project proposals, and ending with selecting a package amongst these projects as well as supporting them technically, financially and logistically, has been adopted.

Preparatory work:

1- Supporting the capacities of civil society:

Five training workshops were organized on the formulation of joint municipal projects with municipalities, amongst which was also a workshop on border cooperation. The training was aimed at strengthening the capacity of associations in the field of leveraging the local reality to achieve a realistic, useful and achievable project idea in partnership with the municipality.

2- Accompany the drafting process:

In the wake of this in-depth training, the beneficiary associations formulated their project ideas: their content, long-term and short-term goals, beneficiary groups, the fields of cooperation with the municipality, an initial idea of cost and implementation requirements. The associations that presented the most elaborate projects, responding to seriousness and efficacy norms were chosen to participate in another workshop with the purpose of auditing the financial and practical plans of each project.

3- Open the door for funding and support:

Then came the opening of the candidacy for participation through the submission of projects fully drafted by the associations active in progressing municipalities, both those that participated in training workshops or others. The applicants were asked to submit project proposals that fell within three areas of intervention, concerning: the partnership between the civil society and the municipalities; contribution to the development of municipal work and improving services; as well as enhancing the participation and interaction of civil society organizations in the affairs of the municipal council and conflict prevention. From the applications, projects were sorted and a bulk among them were chosen, depending on the extent of their conformity with the specifications of the work plan.

4- Supporting and backing up associations:

The selected associations received extensive training on the stages of carrying out the participatory projects, under the supervision of a group of experts, and were provided the logistical and material resources necessary for their projects. A group of experts was also charged with continuing the technical accompanying of the associations throughout the stages of project implementation.

«The integration of teachers in the implementation of the project has had a great impact in the near- and long-term ... The beneficiaries' perception of the environment has also improved, and they have consequently changed their view to taking an effective and vital role in reducing the problem of garbage, and not simply blame the municipality and the public services company. We can open wider horizons by reaching out to stakeholders and accomplishing advanced stages in the participatory management of one of the waste dumps in the capital so as to give a living example and skip the screening stage, which is an essential and indispensable stage,»

Said Thuraya Wahiba, President of Oxygen Society for Environmental Protection.

«The idea of the project is one of the new specialized ideas in which the organization works for the first time. It is the part of the community partnerships between municipalities and civil society organizations, and so came the name of the project 'hand-in-hand' to express the goal we want to achieve.

This experience added to the humanitarian side of the Municipality of Tripoli Center: as the communication channels between the municipality and the citizens have become more accessible and built a lot of confidence between the two parties.»

Mohammed Sweid, Vice Chairman of Ajjal Libya For Human Development and Awareness.

The project

The overall objective of the project: civil organizations and municipal structures are conscious and aware of the meaning and essence of joint action

Municipality: Tripoli Center

Target Groups of the Project: employees and members of the Municipal Council of Tripoli Center Municipality, and six civil society organizations active in Tripoli Center Municipality.

Results of the project:

- Conducting training courses for 20 associations and representatives of Tripoli Center Municipality on the mechanisms of establishing partnerships between citizens, civil society activists and local authorities to reinforce the concept of social peace and local development.
- building a community partnership crowned with the establishment of the « Local Tripoli Center community Partnership », which includes a group of citizens, civil society organizations, the public and private sector, and the Municipality of Tripoli Center, aiming to establish joint initiatives and projects to achieve sustainable development in the region to serve the common good.
- Organizing the «Day of Joy» initiative to organize a clean-up and tree-planting campaign for a park with recreational activities for children, with the participation of a group of residents, civil society organizations, employees of the Dhahra district and the Libyan Red Crescent branch of the city of Tripoli.

3. Decision-making Masters to promote ideas

«The project has achieved many desired and planned effects, as the activities of the project revolve around many exercises in important areas, and each training aims at – to name a few – raising awareness, spreading culture, addressing issues, building skill in the participant. The participants in the administrative training and project formulation were able to write full-fledged projects and submit them to a donor, who pledged to provide a grant to fulfill the project. This is a success story for the project.»
